

ABSTRACT

Automated electronic trading is provided by the cooperation of various modules that generate trade orders and transmit the trade orders to the appropriate broker platform for execution of the trades. The trade orders are generated based on trade strategies and other settings that are determined by the trader or client or combination. These tools enable a client to set up automated trading based on trade orders generated remotely by a professional trader using a vendor module to manage multiple trading strategies and market data inputs.